

What is external forced convection? How does it differ from internal forced convection? Can a heat transfer system involve both internal and external convection at the same time? Explain in detail and give practical examples.

OR

Explain in detail the heat transfer mechanism of photovoltaic modules (solar cells) and how can I enhance the heat transfer rate from its surface?